SINN FEINERS
KEEP UP WORK

Purpose of Organization to Keep Government on Edge
—Hope to Get Arms.

DUBLIN, Nov. 24.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—John Dillon, Nationalist member of the House of Commons, addressing the Ancient Order of Hibernians in Dublin recently condemned the Sinn Feiners for "alienating the sympathy of the United States from the Irish cause." The Sinn Feiners, who are the Irish republicans in Ireland, are the Irish cause. But what was happening in America today filled him with honor. Friends and supporters of the Sinn Feiners in Ireland, he said, were now charged with treason to the flag, and with entering into a combination with Germany to defeat America. He was deeply convinced that the Irish race in America would take steps immediately to disassociate the name of Ireland from such conduct.

Nobody, said Mr. Dillon, could exaggerate the fatal character of the policy of undertaking to make Ireland a republic, and, as a first step in that career, quarreling with the United States and turning on the flag which was the dearest to the Irish race of any flag in the world.

PRAISE GIVEN THE
CADET BATTALION

An expression of appreciation for the appearance and conduct of the boys of the Ogden high school cadet battalion at the Chariot ball is contained in a letter to the battalion from the president, Mrs. J. S. Lewis, and the secretary, Mrs. Thomas Corn, it follows:

Ogden High School Cadets, Ogden, Utah. Dear Boys: At a meeting of the Martha Society, held on Monday, November 26th, the following was unanimously adopted:

Resolved: That we extend our grateful thanks to the Ogden high school cadets for their kind assistance in making the patriotic feature of our charity ball a success.

And I am instructed to express to you our appreciation of the splendid manner in which you performed your duties and for the courteous and gentlemanly way in which you conducted

DISTINGUISHED

Thanksgiving Observed in Paris by an Exchange of Views on War.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—Many distinguished Frenchmen united with American forces in observing Thanksgiving day. Marshal Joffre, former Premier Viviani and Captain Andre Tardieu, the French high commissioner to the United States, were at the same board with William Graves Sharp, the American ambassador. General Pershing and Admiral Sims at a luncheon of the American club at which the members of the French mission to America and the members of the American mission to the inter-allied conference were guests.

Among the Americans present were Bathbridge Colby, member of the shipping board; Vance McCormick, chairman of the war trade board; Oscar T. Crosby, assistant secretary of the treasury; and Paul D. Cravath, who is acting as legal adviser to Mr. Crosby. Laurence V. Benet, president of the American club of Paris, presided.

Mr. Benet's reference to President Wilson, Marshal Joffre, Premier Clemenceau, M. Viviani, General Pershing and Admiral Sims was cheered by the 250 Americans present.

Ambassador Sharp spoke upon the significance of the day while Captain Tardieu dwelt upon the work of the inter-allied conference. He said:

"What we want is a real concentration under an united direction of the allied military and economic strength. President Wilson has said it; Colonel House repeated it. The inter-allied meetings have begun and the hour has come for decisive resolutions."

M. Tardieu urged a vigorous policy in the rear and alluded to the enemy's endeavoring to develop intrigues under the mask of every internationalism.

"The internationalism of Socialism is trying to drag to Stockholm the credulous theorists," he said. "The internationalism of religion is leading to intrigue of which the Vatican has made itself too often the instrument. The internationalism of money is using the legal communications of big public banks to nourish behind our fighters the corrupt efforts of Bolo Pasha and of Cavallinier."

Captain Tardieu after warmly praising ing what England had done and what the Americans are doing, said that perhaps more painful sacrifices of habits and susceptibilities must be made to realize practically the pool of direction, the pool of spirit and the pool of will.

Mr. Colby, who represented Colonel House, the latter being detained by inter-allied conference business, said that the American mission proposed to the British mission that there should be no more trade, no more commerce and that all shipping facilities should be devoted to a single object, a single aim—that is victory. He declared no allied ship or cargo will be dispatched that has not for its express object the maintenance of the fighting forces and the victory of the common cause.

M. Viviani, in concluding a brilliant speech upon America's relation to the war, said that LaFayette, representing France, did not go to fight by the side of Washington for America but for the principle of human liberty. So the Americans did not come to fight for France herself, but for the liberty of the world, he said.

Ogden Man Came Home
To Die

"Three years ago I came home thinking two or three weeks would be my limit to live. I had suffered for years from colic attacks and severe liver and stomach trouble. I happened to see an advertisement of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and purchased a bottle at the drug store and after taking the first dose I felt better than I had for fifteen years. I am now in the best of health—thanks to Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. It removes the curdled mucus from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. AEROPLANE IS TO BE CONSTRUCTED

An aeroplane is being built in Ogden by C. R. Bryant, local representative of the Burroughs Adding Machine company. Being an expert mechanic, he has been working on the machine for a number of months and it is nearing completion in the "T" automobile garage on Hudson avenue.

The biplane is being fitted with a 25-horsepower motor, sufficiently powerful for experimental and pleasure purposes.

HEAVY SHELL HIT
THE AMMUNITION

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 30.—(By the Associated Press).—The killing of two American soldiers and the wounding of five others several days ago, already reported, was due to a heavy German shell which hit a loaded ammunition wagon. Some of the men were on the wagon and others were near by when the shell, which was a chance shot, struck. The wagon with its cargo was blown up. Some of the wounded are in a serious condition and all of them are in hospitals.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG
It's Easy—If You Know Dr.
Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feed your liver and bowels. There's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

TABULATION OF THE LAST GERMAN LOAN

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 24.—Tabulation of subscriptions to the seventh German loan show that over a fourth of the total of twelve and a half billions was contributed in subscriptions of over a million marks, each. 1,632 subscribers averaging over three millions.

The sixth loan had only 770 subscribers in the super-million class.

There was a marked decrease in the number of small subscribers as well as the total number of subscribers. The only classes showing an increase in number of subscribers are those above half a million which are responsible for over a third of the loan. These figures are indicative of the extent to which the loan was subscribed by war supply interests.

BRITISH GRAND
FLEET KEPT BUSY

Puts in Hard Work Day After Day and Week After Week.

ACTIVITY CEASELESS

Sweeps North Sea From End to End Under Careful Direction.

BASE OF BRITISH GRAND FLEET, Nov. 24.—(Correspondence).—The head of the British admiralty, speaking the other day in the house of commons, flung out a challenge to the German navy. He said, "I disclose no secret or if it is a secret I disclose a fact which I should be glad to tell the enemy—when I say that the British grand fleet in its northern base lies behind no shore defenses, but relies on its own strength alone."

There are people in the United States who do not appreciate the activities of the British navy in its home waters, who think that it lies in idleness, like the German high seas fleet, behind impenetrable landlocked bases. For the purpose of removing this impression, the Associated Press representative was asked to visit the grand fleet, live on board the first-line battleships, and observe just what sort of a day's work it puts in day after day and week after week.

No Ships Gather Barnacles. Ceaseless activity is the motto of the grand fleet. Neither men nor ships are permitted to gather rust or barnacles. From its base at the northern tip of the British Isles, it sweeps day and night the 140,000 square miles of the North sea on ceaseless vigil, in unflagging hope that one day its watching will be rewarded by a meeting with the enemy under circumstances wherein he cannot avoid battle. Moreover, this sweeping of the North sea is no mere aimless patrol. In the most casual moves of ships and men there is always a directing mind and a directing plan. The North sea is as well swept in relation to its size as the drawing room of a well-ordered house. The enemy's coastline is still the British navy's frontier.

The harbor which has been the home of the grand fleet for three years is probably the finest of its kind in the world. The whole area comprised in this British northern base is about equal to the hundred-odd square miles which the Germans evacuated in France last spring. The battleship squadrons, for example, within their own particular section of this great base, have room for every kind of practice maneuvers, including target practice.

On a sunny afternoon the correspondent saw eight battleships at turret or target practice, a detachment of cruisers in maneuvers, a seaplane balloon ship at work under conditions simulating those of actual warfare, and off around the edges, various operations by innumerable small craft and auxiliaries.

Night target practice, which also is conducted within the harbor, is always an interesting sight. The battleships steam down the nine-mile course. Suddenly a searchlight picks up a target. Instantly every turret is trained, every gun directed. Then a button is pressed somewhere, and the guns speak as with one voice in a gigantic broadside that awakens the echoes from the hills.

Infinite Variety of Practice. There is an infinite variety to the turret practice on a big battleship. The officer in charge of the turret speaks, "An enemy shell has come in through the turret, killing men numbers 1, 3, 4 and 6. Right gun disabled. Connection with rest of ship lost. Carry on." The "dead men" file off to one side and watch their comrades work as they would in actual battle. There is the zest of a game to it.

The officer speaks again: "Shell has hit turret, killing all men except numbers 1 and 3. Number 3 is seriously wounded. Ammunition hoisting machinery disabled. Fire started in pile of waste behind gun. Carry on." The single wounded man left in the turret must now endeavor to keep the guns in action single-handed, besides dealing with a fire and a seriously wounded man. The "dead men" stand along the edge of the turret and watch their comrades' efforts to "carry on" with interest and amusement.

It is play, but play with a deadly efficiency behind it for it is intended that in actual battle there shall not be a single possibility with which these men will not be ready to deal.

in on all sides by the vast reaches of the Cleveland National forest. They form a pristine, elemental fastness, lifted high above the hot dusty valleys below. Throughout the years they have known no sound save the rolling of the thunder clouds down the sheer canyons which give them entrance and exit or the murmur of countless springs and brooks in the pleasant seasons.

A recent "recreation renaissance" during which the whole nation seemed in search for new breathing places, prompted agents of the United States Forestry service to find other Yosemite and Yellowstone. They "re-discovered" the Lagunas.

To reach it they had to blaze a trail through copse-like growths. The mountains that were tumbled all about them offered many an added barrier. But their Indian guides kept steadfastly ahead, until at last they gazed down upon the new Paradise.

Indian lore had woven a tale around every tree and brook in the favored spot. The Redmen told of how many moons ago, a host of palefaces came and cut gashes in the Coulter pines for the odorous, water-like substance they gave off. The palefaces said that far toward the rising sun many palefaces were engaged in a great war and the side which got the most of this waterlike substance would win. The substance was turpentine.

Descending to the flats the party saw many pines with old gashes over which nature was trying to throw the thick bark. Many of the lips had closed together completely hiding the gash.

The forestry men secured enough information from the Indians to determine that during the Civil war the South had cut off the turpentine supply of the North, and it was necessary for the Union forces to seek new fields for this necessary war fluid. A party pioneered its way into the Lagunas, and, hidden from all paying eyes, kept a continual supply of turpentine going to the Northern camps. The war ended. The turpentine tappers left and the Lagunas were left to their ancient solitude.

The forestry service lost no time. Plans were immediately drawn for the construction of a road from the San Diego-Imperial highway, through the thick bark. Many of the lips had closed together completely hiding the gash. The government's road is to be between ten and twelve miles long, and will be eleven and one-half feet wide. The government engineers are following ancient trails which will make the grade no more than 8 per cent in any one place. "The average grade will be 5 per cent."

The new play place, which although smaller than other national parks, could lend many things to them. Perhaps, in the way of both rugged and refined scenery, will open its canyon gates to the world some time in February. It is twenty miles from the nearest railroad, but will be easily accessible from the highway. It is meant for an all-year camping place, and the government is going to spare no pains in putting it before the world as one of the wonder spots of the western continent. The Indians will remain as guides and will tell the legend of each tree and brook to all who wish to hear.

A DRY COUNTRY.

A man who drove across the country last summer to a little town in Western Kansas met a farmer hauling a wagonload of water.

"Where do you get water?" he asked.

"Up the road about seven miles," the farmer replied.

"And you haul water seven miles for your family and stock?"

"Why in the world don't you dig a well?" asked the traveler, excitedly.

"Because, stranger," the farmer said, firmly, "it's just as far one way as the other."—Exchange.

"My proudest boast," declared the lecturer, who expected his statement to be greeted with enthusiastic cheers, "is that I was one of the men behind the guns."

"How far behind?" came from a sarcastic voice in the gallery.—N. Y. American.

FOOTBALL GAME
CHEERS SOLDIERS

Every American Has Real Thanksgiving in France and Roots for His Favorite.

FRENCH JOIN CHEERING

Men Allowed to Stay Out an Extra Hour and Drill Is Suspended.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Thursday, Nov. 29.—Every American soldier in France spent a real American Thanksgiving day. He dined on turkey and all that goes with it until he could eat no more.

The feature of the day was a football game in which a team from the engineers defeated a team from the infantry. The game was watched by thousands of American troops and a thousand French soldiers who were home from the front. The shouts of the rooters were heard far and wide towards the end of the game the French soldiers getting the hang of it became just as enthusiastic as the Americans and joined in the cheering. Virtually all instruction work and drilling was suspended for the day and in some places the men were permitted to stay out an hour later tonight, in nearly all camp messes the men themselves supplemented the dinner with boxes of cigars and other luxuries and for the time many an American soldier thought he was at home.

NONE FOR MARY JANE.

A rather raw servant girl was told to order the family vegetables at the grocers. After booking what was asked for the tradesman queried: "Will your mistress want any horseradish today? Some just in, nice and fresh."

Tossing her head, Mary Jane said: "No, indeed; we want no such thing I know. My master keeps a motor car."—Exchange.
